

An Invitation

The Canada Institute of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars,
The Canada Institute on North American Issues, and the CIBC invite you to a panel discussion on

Copyright Law in Canada and the United States: The Digital Challenge

The eleventh in the Canada Institute's One Issue, Two Voices series featuring leading international copyright law experts

Barry Sookman

Partner & Co-chair, Technology Law Group, McCarthy Tétrault LLP, Toronto and

Eric J. Schwartz

Partner, Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP, Washington, DC and former Acting General Council, U.S. Copyright Office

Drawing on expertise from both sides of the Canada–U.S. border, the One Issue, Two Voices series is designed to stimulate dialogue on policy issues that have a significant impact on the bilateral relationship. This publication is a primer on current issues in copyright law in Canada and the United States focusing on the transformative changes underway in the copyright regimes in both countries.

Panelists Barry Sookman and Eric Schwartz will discuss the critical challenges and issues posed by the new digital technologies and debate the controversial approaches to copyright reform and enforcement in their respective countries. Giuseppina D'Agostino, professor at York University's Osgoode Hall Law School and director of its Intellectual Property Law and Technology Program, will act as moderator. This presentation will be particularly relevant to members of the cultural, academic, business and legal communities, public policy analysts, government policy analysts, economists, and others with an interest in a comparative view of copyright issues and social policy in Canada and the United States.

Friday, September 25th, 2009

Breakfast: 7:30–8:00 a.m.

Panel: 8:00–10:00 a.m.

CIBC

Commerce Court West – 56th floor

199 Bay Street

Toronto

RSVP to Canada_Institute@yahoo.ca or (416) 815-6272

Limited Seating Available